Vendor reissuing some driver's licenses

The vendor responsible for printing New Mexico driver's licenses and identification cards is reissuing about 1,800 credentials mailed earlier this month because of a printing error.

The affected licenses were printed with the incorrect background, which could mean they won't be accepted as valid identification by law enforcement officers or businesses that require identification.

Affected customers will be asked to destroy the faulty credentials when they receive their replacements in the mail. The replacements are being issued at no cost to the customers involved.
